Fifty-First Congress.

Record of the Business of the First Session.

ACTUAL WORK ACCOMPLISHED.

Some Very Important Bills Passed While a Few Others Are Still Under Consideration. A Carefully Prepared Agenda for the Week Has Been.

Washington, Sept. 29.—The record of the Fifty-first Congress is an important one. In the course of the first session the bill was passed and only by an agreement of the part of members of the majority that the Federal election bill would be called up during this session. The bill therefore goes over.

The actual work accomplished by the Fifty-first Congress is of special interest because it is the first Congress in many years in which one of the two great political parties has had control of both the legislative and executive branches of the government.

A change in rates of customs duties has been brought about, a number of very important changes in existing laws have been agreed to in conference and approved by the house. They need only the approval of the senate to become law.

The feature of the tariff law which has attracted wide attention and which hereafter is expected to create a division in the republican party was the provision for the establishment of reciprocal trade agreements between the United States and the Latin-American countries. This bill was introduced and passed by the senate. It was brought forward by Senator Aldrich and other members of the senate. The bill was introduced by the secretary of state, but it was not until the president, urging the necessity of securing some reciprocity with Latin-American countries, that the free admission to the United States of sugar and other of their products. The recommendation was signed by the house of representatives but was later adopted in a modified form by the senate and agreed to in conference between the two houses.

Next in importance to the new tariff law is the silver legislation enacted by congress. On the 14th of July, 1890, a new law went into effect providing for the issue of coin certificates, based on gold or silver, in exchange for a requirement that the secretary of the treasury should purchase 4,500,000 ounces of silver bullion each month. The bill as it passed the house was practically a free coinage bill, but the conference on the part of the two houses agreed on the compromise of a silver certificate, eliminating the free coinage, but leaving the majority in both houses favored free coinage, the compromise was reached necessary by the fear of an executive veto. The effect of the new silver law was an immediate advance in the price of silver, culminating at a figure higher than any known in history.

The promise of the republican party made in the last campaign that more liberal pension legislation would be enacted was fulfilled in the passage of the pension bill. The bill was introduced by the secretary of the treasury and was given to any soldier who is now disabled from any other cause. The application as received under a law since its enactment so increased the work of the pension office that it was necessary for congress to vote an additional appropriation for the employment of clerks in that office and in the war records division of the department of war.

The action of four new stars to the flag, made by the last congress has been supplemented at this session by the admission of the states of Wyoming and Idaho.

Early in the session of congress a law in the nature of a trust and combinations was enacted. No opportunity to enforce it has yet occurred, and as it was generally regarded as a punitive measure, its value cannot be estimated at this time.

A general land grant forfeiture act, the result of many years' discussion in the two houses of congress, has passed congress and will go to the president for signature tomorrow. It is very comprehensive and is intended to provide for the disposal of all unclaimed lands granted to the construction of the railroad, and the portions of the road which have not been completed at the time of the passage of the law.

The passage of a law having been brought to the attention of the chief of the United States Land Office to obtain a license in North Dakota and later on a renewal of its charter in Montana. The president made the matter the subject of a special message to congress, which was transmitted a bill to the president for his signature.

The transmission through the mails of letters and circulars relating to the sale of newspapers containing advertisements. This bill was passed by the house without a dissent and was signed by the president.

After a lively controversy over the question of a new law in which the cities of New York, Chicago, St. Louis and Washington were concerned, congress passed a law providing a national commission and extending the term of the commission.

An important feature of the present session was the defeat of the Blair bill in the senate. It has passed that body in several other congresses and its rejection was quite unexpected. Among the less important laws enacted by this congress are the following: Requiring the superintendent of census to collect statistics of farms and mortgages in the United States; Increasing the pension of those totally and permanently helpless to $12 per month.

Providing for an assistant secretary of war; Providing for an assistant secretary of the navy; Authorizing the president to cause the promulgation of regulations necessary to prevent the spread of contagious disease from one state to another.

Granting to Canadian vessels the right to assist disarmed Canadian property in the waters of the United States; Providing that a like privilege is granted to United States vessels in Canadian waters; Retaining temporarily a part of the soldiers' pay.

Providing for the exportation of fermented liquor in bond without payment of internal revenue taxes; Authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Hudson river at New York.

Extending the criminal jurisdiction of Federal courts to the Great Lakes; The following joint resolutions were passed: Congratulating the people of the United States of Brazil on their adoption of a republican form of government.

Authorizing the removal of the naval magazine from Ellis Island, New York harbor.

Authorizing the secretary of war to cause the removal of persons in the Mississippi river district and making an appropriation for their relief.

A number of important measures are hanging fire which may go to the president before adjournment, although the chances are greatly in favor of their passage. One of these is the bill to relieve the supreme court of the United States by the establishment of an intermediate court, which is now in conference between the two houses. The bill to amend the law to prohibit the migration of the laborer from one state to another, and it is believed would pass the senate, but Mr. Blair has given notice that he will not call it up again.

A great deal of important work will be left unfinished on the adjournment of this session of congress and will receive consideration at the session which begins in December. The most important of this business has come from the house to the senate and now rests on the senate calendar. Ordinarily this would promise an unusual activity in the senate during the session, but extraordinary conditions will govern the senate during at least the first part of the second session in congress.

The republican members of the senate have pledged themselves to vote for a proposition to change the rules of the senate for the express purpose of making possible the passage of the Federal election bill. The proposition will meet with whatever obstructive opposition the democrats can bring forward. It is a matter of history that the democratic members of the senate at one time wasted two and a half months on a proposition to proceed to organize the senate by the election of officers. They can waste the entire time of the senate during the session in the same way unless the republicans adopt revolutionary tactics.

Then if the proposition to establish a rule under which the previous question can be called is adopted, a democratic senator has figured that the entire time of the senate from Dec. 1 to March 4th can be consumed in a series of amendments to the election bill offered for the purpose of obstruction. So if the republican senators adhere to their determination to press the consideration of the election bill, much other business must suffer. A great deal of time will be consumed in the consideration of the annual appropriation bills.

Next of this legislation would be a bill calling an extra session of congress in March or April. A bill to prevent the adulteration of food and drugs is on the calendar, and it will probably be made a substitute for the election bill for the longer bill which passed the house recently.

A bill to establish a limited postal telegraph has been reported favorably from committee and is on the calendar.

The bankruptcy bill adopted by the commercial bill convention at Minneapolis, and generally known as the Federal bill, passed the house and was reported to the senate with a great many modifications but under the supervision of Mr. Torrey, the author of the bill, and carrying the ideas advocated in the commercial convention it goes over until the next session.

Nearly all bills and resolutions that were reported to the house from committee during this session on or before the passage of the house calendar failed of passage and remain on the senate calendar. Among the important measures are the bill to amend the law relating to the appeals of several judges and a bill to provide a commission on the subject of a national railway, the bill to encourage the construction of a continental railway to connect North and South America, and a bill to increase the number of members of the army; the bill to provide a commission on the subject of a national railway, the bill to encourage the construction of a continental railway to connect North and South America, and a bill to increase the number of members of the army; the bill to provide a commission on the subject of a national railway, the bill to encourage the construction of a continental railway to connect North and South America, and a bill to increase the number of members of the army.

standing the right of suffrage to women for the removal of National Guard members from New York to Washington in the spring bill.

There are a few senate bills of a general character on the house calendar. Most of these bills measure of the kind were either passed by the house or were not reported to the house committee to which they were referred. The most important of these bills left on the calendar are the subsidy and shipping bills.

The number of laws passed in the first session of the Fifty-first congress was: Public laws 287, private bills 297, public resolutions 12, private resolutions 12. These figures will be swelled considerably by the action of the president on a large number of bills now in his hands.

The number of bills introduced at this session to date were: Senate bills 1,011, resolutions 129, house bills 1,116, resolutions 202. The number introduced in the first session of the Fifty-first congress was: Senate bills 3,359, resolutions 118, house bills 11,099, resolutions 227.

The time consumed in consideration of the election bill and the appropriation bills, may operate to the exclusion of the bills which have passed the house and are now on the senate calendar, among which are bills to transfer the government service from the treasury to the navy department, to discontinue the coinage of the $2 and $1 gold pieces, and three cent nickel pieces. Also the following senate bills which have been reported favorably from the committee: The bill to amend the law relating to the removal of persons in the Mississippi river district and making an appropriation for their relief.

A Collision of Trains.

Two Freight Trains Wrecked on the B. & O. Road.

LOSS OF LIFE AND PROPERTY.

Eight Men Killed and One Other Terribly Injured. Failure of the Operator to Deliver Orders the Cause of the Disaster. Other Railroad Accidents.

ZANESVILLE, O., Sept. 29.—One of the worst freight wrecks in the history of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad occurred ten miles west of here at midnight Saturday night. Eight men were killed, one terribly injured and property to the amount of $2,000 destroyed. The wreck was caused by the failure of Francis Kelly, operator at Blackhead, to deliver orders to an eastbound freight, sidetracking it at that station until a westbound freight passed.

The trains collided on a sharp curve just outside of a dense wood and neither engineer saw the other train until within a few yards of it. The engineer and fireman on the east-bound train jumped, the latter escaping unhurt, but the former, John Kemp, of Newark, had a leg cut off near the body and is not expected to live.

The engineer and fireman of the west-bound train were instantly killed, the former being terribly mangled by the twisted cars, which were rammed into the tender. His blood and brains were scattered over the ground for several feet around.

The fireman was caught between the engine and tender and crushed to death. When taken out it was found by the fire from the engine.

The list of killed is as follows: John Buckingham, engineer, of Newark, O.; John Graham, resident unknown; Benjamin Stuart, brakeman, of Garfield, O.; Glenn Bash, of Zanesville; Thomas H. Conroy, of Newark, O.; George W. Stoneburner, of Zanesville; William Firestone, fireman, of Newark, O.; and one unknown.

The dead were removed to an empty car as fast as recovered and taken to Newark for burial. A large force of men were at work all day clearing the track of the debris. Twelve loaded cars were completely demolished and it took all day Sunday to get the track clear. The operator fled as soon as he learned the awful result of his carelessness and has not yet been apprehended.

Another on the Same Road. ZANESVILLE, O., Sept. 29.—Another wreck on the Baltimore and Ohio road, west of Zanesville, occurred Sunday evening between two passenger trains, causing the loss of the two engines, two loaded cars and the death of two men. The wreck was caused by the failure of the engineer of the west-bound train to deliver orders to the east-bound train, which was on the same track.

Train strikes a cow. WASHINGTON, C. H., Sept. 29.—An empty southbound train on the Dayton, Fort Wayne and Chicago railroad struck a cow near Convergence and the engine and thirteen cars were knocked to smithereens. The trainmen claim that three cars passed safely over the engine and hit on the track safe, every wheel being on the track.

FIGHTING ITALIANS. Two Factions Quarrel About a New Secret Order. HAZLETON, Pa., Sept. 29.—There are two factions of Italians in this city and surrounding country, those who belong to a secret order, and those who are opposed to it. There is a great deal of bloodshed between them. Saturday night the fighting began to light. Revolvers and knives were produced and for a time things looked desperate. They were finally ejected from the hall and removed the light on the street. The non-secret men were victorious.

One of the slain was on his way to a house on the corner of the town and was shot up from within and his body and limbs were riddled with two or three bullets. The other man was ejected from the hall and removed the light on the street. The non-secret men were victorious.

A MILLION DOLLAR FIRE.

One of Chicago's Largest Packing Houses Burned. Other Fire Losses.

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—More than one-half of the extensive stock yards plant and property of the Anglo-American Provision Company was destroyed by fire yesterday. The most conservative estimate of the loss is $1,000,000, the highest nearly $1,500,000. Prior to the accident a few months since by the English structure with a stock and loaded capital of $500,000, the property was owned by the Fowler Brothers.

Considerable mystery surrounds the origin of the fire. Flames were discovered in the engine room shortly after 1 a. m. and the private fire company, maintained by the Englishmen, fought them for some time before calling for reinforcements from the city. Before these arrived the flames had spread to the main packing house, thence to warehouses E, and in the packing house were 9,000 dressed hogs which had been slaughtered during the past two days. While on one floor of the adjoining warehouse there were 20,000 pounds of sausage in process of curing.

On the other floors of this and the adjoining warehouses were stored the carcasses of 30,000 hogs together with an immense quantity of beef. With this material to feed on the fire raged furiously for hours and although twenty-six of the city engines were called into requisition, it was not until late yesterday afternoon that it was brought under control. At one time it was feared that the conflagration would cover a greater portion of the packing house district. Several thousand live hogs were with difficulty saved from warehouses F.

The loss proper is fully covered by insurance, but the loss resulting from the suspension of business will be enormous as the concern has been killing from 4,000 to 7,000 hogs daily, and proposed to increase the number to 12,000 in two weeks. Thirteen hundred men are thrown out of employment. A searching investigation into the origin of the fire is to be made. General Manager Stobo places the loss on buildings at $25,000, machinery, including three ice machines, $24,000, and stock nearly $500,000.

Patrick O'Donnell of engine company 13, was seriously injured by falling through a skylight in the roof of warehouse B. He was badly hurt internally.

A Church Destroyed. PHOENIA, Ill., Sept. 29.—Shortly after the beginning of morning services at Grace Mission Presbyterian church it was discovered that the edifice, a large frame structure, was on fire. The fire was caused by a candle which had been left burning in a room. The fire spread rapidly and the church was completely destroyed. The loss was about $10,000.

The Wife saved Him.
The Delaware Gazette thinks it pays you to take your wife's advice some times, yes in about ninety-nine cases out of one hundred. Davis Loose, an old and wealthy farmer of Seneca county, appreciates this more fully than he ever did before. Tuesday a couple of slick strangers and a man towed a boat to the shore and asked him to represent that they wanted to buy the land. In the meantime they showed him the mysteries of a little game with three-cards monte, known to the "profess" as three-card monte. The old fellow thought he saw his way clear to a fortune and started to row to draw $5,000 from the bank, which the sharpers would speedily have gulped, but luckily Frank Frank, who after some argument, convinced him that the strangers would leave him, under protest against losing this chance to win a fortune Loose dropped out of the game and is $5,000 ahead. It's dollars to doughnuts, though, that the old sinner will kick like a steer the next time his good old wife wants a new dress or a new carpet for the parlor.

There are many white soaps, each represented to be "just as good as the Ivory." They are not, but like all counterfeits, they lack the peculiar and remarkable qualities of the genuine. Ask for Ivory Soap and insist upon having it. 'Tis sold everywhere.
